FAQS

Reasons For Air Bubble Formations On Acrylic Sheets

	 Acrylic are bonded in extremely humid conditions	 When substrate loses moisture after installation	 Insufficient or lack of pressing during the bonding period of laminate
	 Use of water base synthetic resin adhesive any other than PEVA (Polyethylene Vinyl Acetate Co-polymer)	 Use of extremely large acrylic sheets	 Debonding in certain areas because of uneven substrate surface

To avoid delamination / air bubbles in between ply and laminate, the above steps should be taken care of. Bonding of acrylic sheets shouldn't be completed under high humidity.
